From the Editor:

If you are planning a trip to the West Virginia Archives and History Library this summer to explore your genealogy or to learn more about the history of your home county, I suggest you review several past issues of Archives and History News in order to make the best use of your research time:

Archives and History News is available in many West Virginia historical/genealogical society libraries and some public libraries. Text of all issues are available on our Web site: http://www.wvculture.org/history/news.html. If you do not have personal access to the Internet, most public libraries provide computers with Internet hookup.

Be sure to call us and/or check our Web site for information on hours, parking and driving directions. We look forward to seeing you!

MARKING OUR PAST:

West Virginia’s Historical Highway Markers

The long-awaited new book listing West Virginia historical highway markers is now available. Marking Our Past: West Virginia’s Historical Highway Markers, has been published by the West Virginia Division of Culture and History. Proceeds from the sale of the book will benefit the West Virginia State Historical Highway Marker Program with funds to support the replacement, repair or revision of existing markers.

Markers are listed by county, with title, exact text and general location of each marker given. (Please note that the wording on several markers is obsolete and not acceptable by today’s standards. An example is the use of the word “savages” in reference to Native Americans. Outmoded markers have been listed for replacement as funding allows.) Markers are indexed by title and by subject. For example, the marker honoring Mike Fink is listed by its actual title of “Grave of Mike Fink” and also under “Fink, Mike.” Black-and-white photographs from the West Virginia State Archives Photograph Collection illustrate the book.
The first historical highway marker authorized by the state of West Virginia was installed in 1937. Earlier markers placed by county historical groups and patriotic societies are also included in the book. As of January 2002, fifty-four approved markers were pending manufacture and placement. Some of them are new markers, some are replacements for missing markers, and a few are revised markers to correct or replace outdated wording.

Marking Our Past: West Virginia’s Historical Highway Markers can be purchased at the offices of Archives and History in The Cultural Center, Charleston, for $13.73 ($12.95 plus $.78 sales tax), or by mail at our address for $15.00 by check or money order (sales tax, postage and handling included, no cash please). Free copies of the book have been distributed to West Virginia school and public libraries.

FAQs about the West Virginia Historic & Scenic Highway Marker Program

When was the marker program established?

It was implemented in 1934, during the Great Depression, to encourage tourism. The West Virginia Commission on Historic and Scenic Markers worked with the State Road Commission, Works Progress Administration, and Federal Emergency Relief Administration to place 440 markers in 1937 and publish the first guide. After World War II, markers were placed at the sites of most state-run facilities and schools. The West Virginia Historic Commission took over the program in 1963. Since the late 1960s, the program has been managed by the West Virginia State Archives, which is today part of the West Virginia Division of Culture & History.

Does the West Virginia State Archives keep a list of markers?

The State Archives has maintained files on each of the markers. Unfortunately, many of these files were outdated because markers had been moved and road names have been changed. In 1996, the Division of Culture & History was awarded a federal Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act (ISTEA) grant to survey the state's highway markers. The result is Marking Our Past.

Who pays for the markers?

Most were funded by the state until 1985. All markers placed since then have been funded by groups, or in some cases by private individuals. There are two styles of markers, both of which include the State Seal. The traditional cast aluminum marker is available for $1,300 with the same inscription on both sides or $1,400 with a different inscription on each side. An 80-gauge aluminum sign which gives the appearance of the traditional marker costs approximately $350, but will not last as many years. Installation, standards and transportation costs for either type of sign are approximately $100. All prices are subject to change.

What subjects or events will be considered?

The site, property, district, or community honored with a marker must possess some degree of significance in state or local prehistory (archaeology), history, natural history, architecture, or cultural life. A complete list of guidelines can be obtained from the State Archives.

How many markers are there?

Approximately 1,000 markers have been placed in West Virginia. However, the recent survey indicates nearly 30% are no longer standing and a majority of the remaining markers are in need of refurbishing.

How are markers maintained?
There is no dedicated source of state funding to repair or replace markers. Some historical societies and civic groups assume the cost for refurbishing markers in their counties. (Presently the George Rogers Clark marker at Point Pleasant is being refurbished by interested citizens and students.) Missing or damaged markers should be reported to the State Archives.

How can I find more information about the markers program?

Please contact Fredrick H. Armstrong, Director, West Virginia Archives and History.

SUMMER REUNION ALERT

Summer is the prime time for all types of reunions—family, school, company, community, church. If your family or organization is holding a reunion, please send a copy of any memory books or videotapes that you produce, whether done by amateurs or professionals. Your photos and memoirs are valuable resources for genealogists and state historians alike. In particular we have many requests for information and photographs of the company towns which once thrived in West Virginia, but we have little in our collection to describe a way of life no longer found in the mountains. Please share your pride in your own personal history with the many people who are unable to attend your gatherings. Making your heritage a part of the Archives collection means that it will be preserved for posterity and available to present and future historians.

TWO COLLECTIONS ADDED TO ARCHIVES

PHOTOGRAPHS ON THE INTERNET

As we covered last month, Archives and History has launched a new portion of our Web site devoted to the Archives Photograph Collection. Two new collections will be added in May. The Bollinger Collection consists of photographs of the construction of the current West Virginia State Capitol designed by Cass Gilbert. The circa 1900 Tuck Taylor Collection includes family photographs, scenic views of the Fayette County area, and coal mining scenes.
